BUILDING VALUE THROUGH COMMUNITY

M

Membership organizations and business associations across the board are increasingly facing challenges of a fragmented, rapidly changing business community. Staying relevant means we need to understand who our community is and how best to engage them. As the President and CEO, I am proud to see the Burnaby Board of Trade leadership and staff meet these challenges head on with programs and initiatives that reflect our changing community.

In March 2016 we launched The Women's Business Success Network which has flourished over this past year. With over 100 members, the network organizes events that are meaningful to issues facing women in the workplace such as this year's Women Mean Business event and its creative Envision 2017 workshop.

Millennials aged 15 to 35 are now the biggest generation in the Canadian workforce. Attracting and engaging this segment of the workforce has meant doing things a little differently. In this case the BBOT has taken an arms-length approach by engaging a small group of young professionals to tell us what they are looking for in events, content and programming. The Burnaby Young Professionals Network successfully launched in November 2016 and was followed up with a series of BYPN "How to" workshops aimed at developing the skills necessary for success.

I'm pleased that this kind of forward thinking programming has earned us recognition both locally and internationally. In 2016 we were recognized as finalists by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce for Innovative Programming; in 2017 the Burnaby Board of Trade received the Outstanding Core Competency Award from the Western Association of Chamber Executives (WACE) for the BBOT's Pledge for a Sustainable Community program, an award that recognizes innovative programming by Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce from across Western Canada and the USA; and more recently the Pledge for a Sustainable Community was recognized with an Environmental Award for environmental stewardship by the City of Burnaby.

Message from the President and CEO Paul Holden

We continue to look at ways to engage and identify the needs of our business community. Our focus this coming year will be to provide business with the tools and resources to help them succeed in a competitive market. Where we can make a difference is in the personal attention that connects business with practical solutions and services.

Your support also helps us to advocate on issues that are vital to the health of our business community. Recently, The Burnaby Board of Trade advocated for the repeal of CASL, Canada's Anti-Spam Legislation, which imposes significant limitations on sales prospecting and places undue administrative burden on business and will take this issue to the national level at the Canadian Chamber of Commerce AGM in September. This is just one example of recent advocacy and policy work we've undertaken. We understand that businesses have made a significant investment in this community and it is our role to ensure that the voice of business is heard and that we advocate on their behalf.

I am proud of the tireless efforts put forth by the staff and BBOT volunteers to ensure that the Burnaby Board of Trade lives up to its reputation as a first class business association. Looking ahead we will continue to evaluate our programs, benefits and services to ensure they are meeting the needs of a dynamic and changing business community of the 21st century.

I would like to thank our community partners, the City of Burnaby and our amazing members for making Burnaby such a wonderful place to live, work, learn and play and I look forward to what this next year brings.

What made these MILLENNIALS join the BBOT?

Resourceful Millennials are seeing just how beneficial Burnaby Board of Trade (BBOT) membership is to building their businesses and long-term connections. While some in their generation might not realize the many perks to Chamber membership, others have realized the many benefits by joining the BBOT and seeing the wealth of benefits that come with membership in boosting their business profile and their career connections.

From Pajamas to Board Member

The biggest misconceptions Millennials may have about the BBOT, or Chambers in general, BCjobs.ca CEO Ryan St. Germaine says is that these organizations might be stuffy or that newer, younger members won't be well received.

"That's not the case at all. The BBOT team and its members are super welcoming to new members and those starting out in their career. I have a lot of fun at events and always end up engaging in interesting conversations," says St. Germaine, who joined the BBOT in 2011 and today sits on its board of directors.

St. Germaine was building out a new platform called Jobcast back in 2011 with his software development team. He and the team were all working remotely from home, and St. Germaine realized it was time to get out of his pajamas. Enter the BBOT.

"I had no expectations when I joined. I just wanted to get involved with and interact with fellow business owners and leaders," he says. "I'm really glad I did! In addition to making some great friendships, it has had a hugely positive impact on my business."

Today, St. Germaine runs the leading job board in Western Canada, which he started back in 2001 with his business partner, Johnny Oshika. The website has hundreds of thousands of job seeker visits each month and they work with the top local companies.

With over 17 years of experience building, growing, and leading companies, St. Germaine is an expert in software licensing, recruitment technology, advertising sales, and building scalable revenue models.

St. Germaine joined the BBOT when he was 35 and realized the benefits of membership early on.

"At a technology-related event hosted by the BBOT back in 2011, I connected with Bill Tam, CEO of the BC Technology Association," St. Germaine says. "Bill introduced me to their growth team, who helped me build my Jobcast business, which ended up being a finalist for Startup of the Year in 2015. That connection has also led to a long-lasting partnership with the BC Tech Association. We now help BC Tech members find technical candidates through events and online through our BCjobs.ca platform."

Getting involved with the BBOT Membership Committee has also enabled St. Germaine to get to know people on a deeper level to strengthen bonds, he adds, saying the more he gets involved with the BBOT, the more rewarding it is.

"It's the connections you don't expect that are the most beneficial," he says. "So much of our work is conducted over a computer these days that it's important for me to meet with people face to face. From these interactions, you never know what opportunities will present themselves. Whether it's a new business deal, acquisition of new talent for your team, or membership savings, there are many great reasons to join the BBOT."

The Student Turned Mentor

Rose Phan was 23 years old when she became involved with the BBOT. At the time, she was a Health Sciences student at SFU when a friend told her about the Access: Student Career Development Program, which provides graduating students with the connections and tools they need to compete in the job market.

"I thought that it sounded very interesting and would love to have some exposure to my industry with a mentor before I start looking for work,” says Phan, adding, “I loved the program, especially the events and workshops. I was able to meet the BBOT team, which was amazing, and it made me want to get more involved.”

After graduating from the Access program, Phan became chairperson for the BBOT’s marketing, social and communications committee and went to work with a team of students on promoting the BBOT’s social media pages.

Eventually, she went on to join a new initiative called the Burnaby Young Professionals Network (BYPN), which engages Burnaby’s emerging young professionals. Building on the Access program, the BYPN hosts events and learning opportunities for emerging leaders. The goals of the program are to help young professionals build strong networks in the community as well as promote the development of useful skills that can help them in their careers and future opportunities.

Phan also began mentoring others, passing on the guidance and support she gained through her involvement with the Board.

After graduating from SFU with a Bachelor of Health Sciences, Phan is now studying computer applications part-time at BCIT. As well, she works in the Medical Device industry and says her involvement in the BBOT helps offset the fact that her current job requires her to work independently with little interaction with others.

“I have always loved working in teams and so this opportunity with BBOT has been very beneficial,” she explains. “Also, going to events and connecting with people is very fun. I don’t get to do a lot of that in my current work so it’s nice to have a balance.”

Phan found a family like atmosphere at the BBOT that was fostered over time – by attending events, volunteering and getting to know the staff at the BBOT and connecting with other business professionals.

She acknowledges some in her generation may feel intimidated to join a Chamber.

“The thought of networking may scare some Millennials,” she says, but urges them to check it out anyway. “Everyone is so friendly and genuine. ... Life is about taking risks, the more things you do that you are afraid of, the more successful you become. Take a risk and it can lead you to something wonderful.”

IT Project Manager, Business & Partner Solutions | TELUS
Board Member, Access Committee | Burnaby Board of Trade
Chair, Burnaby Young Professionals Network | Burnaby Board of Trade

Can you tell me about yourself?

I graduated from the Beedie School of Business at Simon Fraser University with a joint major in Business and Computing Science and currently work at TELUS as an IT Project Manager.

How did you get involved with the BBOT?

I took part in the Access program at BBOT in my final year of university because I wanted to strengthen my network within Burnaby, where I was born and raised. Access gave me an opportunity to get involved with the board through different events and volunteer opportunities, so I was more than willing to take on a leadership role when they reached out about developing a Burnaby Young Professional’s Network.

At what age did you join the BBOT, and did that impact your involvement?

I joined BBOT when I was 23 while the Access program was still in its pilot year. I was fairly active in that program and managed to build strong relationships with the staff and other program participants, and it was because of those relationships that I continued to stay involved even when I graduated.

How did (and does) it benefit you to be involved with the BBOT?

Being involved in the board offers me a chance to give back to the community in a way that also aligns with my own values. It also allows me to build more meaningful connections with people in different industries that I otherwise would not have met while developing my leadership, communication and problem solving skills.

What do you think are some of the misconceptions Millennials may have about the BBOT, or Chambers in general?

A few misconceptions are that Boards are for people who are established in the industry or own their own businesses, that people you meet at events are primarily looking to build business relationships, and that most of the benefits you get from joining the board only apply to businesses instead of individuals.

Were there any surprises for you, in terms of the benefits of joining the BBOT?

What surprised me most was the degree of flexibility I had in helping to develop programs at BBOT. The Burnaby Young Professional’s Network we are developing right now is built purely by my team and what we think would benefit young professionals in our generation, and BBOT is always willing to provide the support we need to implement our ideas.

What would you say to young entrepreneurs and business professionals about BBOT? How does it benefit them?

BBOT is an opportunity to get exposed to different industries and build both personal and professional relationships. Through the Burnaby Young Professional’s Network, BBOT has shown they are committed to helping young professionals develop their careers through skills development workshops and opportunities to network both with community leaders as well as like-minded individuals. One of the core values of BYPN is to foster authentic relationships between people in the community so that there is a strong element of trust and willingness to help each other grow.

The BBOT's signature networking event, these popular monthly breakfasts provide an opportunity to meet with a variety of business contacts and develop meaningful connections.

NRG attendees experience the exponential power of networking as facilitated networking activities and games connect them with person after person during these fun, lively events.

STANDING UP and Speaking Out

The Burnaby Board of Trade (BBOT) provides additional value to our members by representing their interests and the interests of the broader business community with all levels of government.

All BBOT policies and positions are member-driven and developed with significant input and participation from our members and various committees.

Explore these policy highlights or visit bbot.ca/advocacy for all of our recent advocacy efforts. Contact Cory Redekop, Manager of Events & Policy at cory@bbot.ca for more information.

CASL - Canada's Anti-Spam Law

Recognizing that CASL hampers marketing and sales efforts and is a significant burden on business, the BBOT advocated directly with Minister of Industry on ways to improve law and successfully advocated for amendment and replacement of CASL to be adopted as the formal policy of the BC Chamber of Commerce and its 125 Chambers of Commerce/Boards of Trade members.

Supporting Women in Business

Believing that there is a business case for greater gender diversity at the board and executive level, the BBOT's Women's Business Success Network publishes a policy calling for progressive policies to encourage more women get considered for vacant positions and successfully advocates for the BC Chamber of Commerce to make this a provincial policy and priority.

Economic Development & the Metrotown Downtown Plan

Creating a dynamic, livable and attractive downtown in Metrotown will allow Burnaby to maximize the tremendous potential of the Metrotown area, creating a destination for people to live, businesses to operate, tourists to visit and commerce to be done. The BBOT supported the Metrotown Downtown Plan and advocated directly with the City of Burnaby to ensure the business community can benefit from the continued development.

Burnaby

THE CENTRAL CITY

The thriving centre of Metropolitan Vancouver, Burnaby features four vibrant town centres, rapid transit, major post-secondary institutions, high-tech business districts, an unparalleled wealth of parks and conservation lands and a progressive Board of Trade – all in one of Canada's most culturally diverse communities.

It is the region's best place to live, work, learn and play. Visit www.burnaby.ca to find out more.
